There are more than 20,000 foreign companies operating in France, where they employ over two million people: what better advert could there be than this for the business environment in our country? Its steadfast attractiveness as a business location can be seen in that France was ranked third in Europe in 2015 for the number of job-creating foreign investment projects received, and was also the leading destination for foreign investment in industry.

With its global outlook and warm welcome for talent in all its forms, France is committed to doing all it can to attract and help investors expand their businesses on French soil. This ‘Doing Business’ guide is designed in the same spirit of hospitality, as it seeks to provide essential information to investors, key talent and their families on a full range of regulatory, tax and employment law matters that may arise when moving to France.

Updated every year, it takes into account all recent reforms to the business environment in France to improve the attractiveness of the French economy.

This 2017 edition consequently examines two major reforms to enhance the welcome for incoming talent:
- The extension of the special expatriate tax exemption scheme to eight years.

Furthermore, a specific procedure for investors and employees that are part of the ‘La French Tech’ program (e.g. French Tech Ticket winners) has also been introduced through the French Tech Visa.

Finally, Business France has created a new personalized online guide, Welcome to France, which is designed to take you through the key stages of moving to France.

Recent government measures resolutely focused on openness are making France a destination of choice for foreign investors, founders of businesses and startups, company directors and employees.

These nationwide international mobility rules are designed to make it easier for highly qualified personnel to come to France, and for employees to complete intra-company transfers. They include multi-year residence permits, which were made more widely available towards the end of 2016, with the twin aims of smoothing the arrival of incoming foreign talent and their families, and helping to make France a more attractive business location.

Companies in France can offer their employees optimum working conditions – due to a highly effective social security system and a vast array of bilateral social security agreements – while the costs of sending employees to work in France can be offset through one of the most attractive expatriate tax systems in Europe.

The main consideration for foreign businesses posting or sending employees to work in France is to choose the most appropriate migration status, the most effective social security coverage and the most advantageous tax status.

In all these areas, employers and foreign nationals should work together to anticipate the procedures to be followed to give foreign talent and their families the best possible chance of successfully establishing themselves in France.

To help them move and settle in to life in a foreign country, Business France has set up an information service for foreign talent and their families.

The Welcome to France website, launched in February 2017, has been designed to take them through the key stages of moving to France, and includes a personalized guide that can be compiled and completed online.

The most recent initiative, the French Tech Visa, is a separate procedure for issuing a ‘Talent Passport’ multi-year residence permit, specifically tailored to France’s tech ecosystem.
What does entering, staying and working in France involve? What would be the most suitable migration status? These are just some of the key questions for employees or company directors to think about in advance to help them organize their move to France, and ensure that they and their families enjoy their stay in the best possible conditions.
ENTERING FRANCE: HOLDING A VISA

EU, EEA and Swiss nationals are free to travel and work in France without a visa, residence permit or work permit. They must simply register with the mairie (municipal offices) of their commune within three months of their arrival.

A visa authorizes the holder to enter French territory, travel within the Schengen Area and stay in France for a specified period.

Typically, a visa only authorizes its holder to enter France. To stay in France for a longer period and work in the country, a residence permit is required.

SHORT-STAY VISA: ‘SCHENGEN’ VISA

Unless visitors are exempt due to their nationality, they will require a short-stay visa for business, official visits and personal visits.

This visa enables the holder to travel throughout the 26 countries in the Schengen area (EU and EEA Member States, with the exception of Bulgaria, Romania, Cyprus, Croatia, Ireland and the United Kingdom).

Length of stay: Short-stay visas can be issued for up to 90 days per 180-day period, either for single or multiple entries to France and/or the Schengen Area (travel visa).

Travel visas are intended in particular for people wishing to conduct business relations in France without actually residing in the country. They are issued for a total period of one to five years, thereby saving holders doing business in France from having to apply for a new visa each time they travel. The length of time that travel visa holders remain in France may not exceed 90 days per 180-day period.

Procedure: A request should be filed with the embassy or consulate of France in the foreign national’s usual country of residence.

Engaging in paid employment (specific case for foreign employees): In cases where a foreign employee makes a short trip to France, a short-stay visa alone does not authorize the holder to engage in paid employment, for which obtaining a work permit may be a pre-requisite. To determine whether a work permit will be necessary when a company wishes to send or receive an employee in France for an assignment of less than three months, thought should be given to the reason for the stay.

If an employee is traveling to France on a business trip to attend an occasional meeting or to meet clients, a short-stay visa will suffice, unless they are exempt from needing to hold one (due to their nationality).

If an employee is on a short-term assignment to train, advise, or provide technical assistance to a company in France, a temporary work permit (autorisation provisoire de travail) is usually required as well as the visa. The deciding factor is whether the employee provides a service and/or effectively participates in the host company and/or is working as a subordinate for the host company.

However, foreign employees undertaking paid employment for three months or less in one of the following fields are exempt from the requirement to obtain a provisional work permit:
- Sporting, cultural, artistic and scientific events.
- Conferences, seminars and trade shows.
- Production and distribution of cinematic and audiovisual works, shows and recordings.
- Modeling and artistic posing.
- Personal service workers and domestic workers working in France during their private employers’ stay in the country.
- Audit and consulting in IT, management, finance, insurance, architecture and engineering, under the terms of a service agreement or intra-company transfer agreement.
- Occasional teaching activities by invited lecturers.

Extending the stay: Short-stay visa holders must leave France once their visa expires, without any possibility for renewing the visa while in France.

LONG-STAY VISA

For stays of more than 90 days, a long-stay visa must be requested from the French consular authorities in the applicant’s country of residence. This visa authorizes holders to request a residence permit once they arrive in France.

Validity period: A long-stay visa is valid for three months, during which time the holder must apply for a residence permit.

Procedure: A long-stay visa should be requested from the French embassy or consulate in the applicant’s usual country of residence. The applicant must then personally request a residence permit from the local Préfecture immediately upon arrival in France.
RESIDENCE PERMIT AND PAID OR SELF-EMPLOYMENT

The type of residence permit required depends on what the foreign national will be doing in France, irrespective of whether they will be employed or self-employed.

For all stays of up to 12 months, a long-stay visa equivalent to a residence permit (VLS-TS) corresponding to the reason for the stay is issued by the consular authorities.

This VLS-TS visa authorizes not only entry to France but also the holder’s residence rights for between 3 months and 12 months, without having to request a residence permit, and also permit paid employment or self-employment in France, as specified in each case.

The holder’s family can also enter France and remain on French soil. Any extension to their stay will require a residence permit.

For stays longer than 12 months, new multi-year residence permits were introduced on November 1, 2016.

“Talent Passports” and “intra-company transfer” residence permits underpin the residence rights of foreign talent in France, making France a destination of choice for foreign investors, entrepreneurs, company directors and employees.

The “French Tech Visa” is a separate procedure focusing on the tech ecosystem in France to make it easier for entrepreneurs, business investors and employees in this dynamic ecosystem to obtain this multi-year permit.

TALENT PASSPORTS

Foreign investors, entrepreneurs, company directors and employees can obtain a multi-year ‘Talent Passport’ residence permit if they meet the eligibility criteria specific to the reason for their stay in France.

Validity period: Four years (on a renewable basis)

Procedure: Applications for long-stay visas and residence permits must be submitted to the French embassy or consulate in the applicant’s usual country of residence no more than three months before the date of arrival in France.

As soon as they arrive in France, applicants must apply to the Préfecture at their place of residence in France for a ‘Talent Passport’ residence permit.

Taking up paid or self-employment: Talent Passport holders can undertake paid or self-employment for which their permit was issued, whether it be commercial, industrial or as an employee, provided that, in the case of regulated professions, they have the required qualifications.

Extending a stay: Renewal applications must be submitted to the Préfecture in the place of residence two months before the residence permit expires, by presenting documents establishing that the applicant continues to meet the conditions under which their permit was issued.

After five years’ regular and uninterrupted residence in France, an application may be made for a residence card, authorizing the holder to stay and undertake any paid or self-employment in France for 10 years on a renewable basis.

Accompanying family members: Upon application, spouses will be issued with a ‘Talent Passport – Family’ residence permit. This permit authorizes them to stay and undertake any paid or self-employment in France throughout the validity period of the foreign national’s residence permit.

INVESTING AND UNDERTAKING A COMMERCIAL OR INDUSTRIAL ACTIVITY IN FRANCE

Four categories of Talent Passport are likely to apply to foreign company directors, company founders and investors.

TALENT PASSPORT MARKED ‘COMPANY DIRECTOR’

A Talent Passport residence permit is issued to a foreign national wishing to serve as a company’s legal representative (company director) in France.

A company director is an individual appointed to act as a company’s representative in France for all acts relating to that company’s management, for which they are answerable to the shareholders, management and labor, and third parties, particularly in the areas of personnel management and employment law.

Those with the power to bind a company, and thus with the status of company director, include the following:

- The director of a limited liability company (société à responsabilité limitée – SARL).
- The Chairman and CEO of a public limited company (société anonyme – SA) or simplified limited company (société par actions simplifiée – SAS).
- An individual with the power to bind a foreign legal entity (representative of a branch or liaison office).

TALENT PASSPORT MARKED ‘BUSINESS INVESTOR’

A ‘Talent Passport’ residence permit is issued to a foreign national making a direct business investment in France and wishing to settle in France to monitor the progress of their investment. Purely financial investments do not require the investor to reside in France, and are therefore not eligible for a residence permit. In such cases, a multiple-entry short-stay visa known as a travel visa may suffice.

The DIRECCTE (Regional Directorate for Enterprise, Competition, Consumption and Employment) office local to where the business will be based in France may be asked to appraise a project’s economic viability.

FRENCH TECH VISA

Investors and business angels associated with the French Tech program are also eligible for this type of residence permit.

‘French Tech Visa for Investors’

= Talent Passport marked ‘business investor’

Further information about this procedure can be found on the French Tech Visa website.

TALENT PASSPORT MARKED ‘NEW BUSINESS’

A foreign national planning to set up a new business in France is likely to be eligible for a Talent Passport provided, in particular, that they are injecting at least €30,000 into the planned business venture.

The planned business venture may take various forms:

- A business in the applicant’s own name.
- A French company.
- A French company that is a subsidiary of a foreign company.
- An establishment of a foreign legal entity

The DIRECCTE (Regional Directorate for Enterprise, Competition, Consumption and Employment) office local to where the business will be based in France may be asked to appraise a project’s economic viability.

FRENCH TECH VISA

French Tech Ticket winners and startup founders selected by a French Tech incubator or accelerator are also eligible for this type of residence permit.

‘French Tech Visa for Founders’

= Talent Passport marked ‘innovative business project’

Further information about this procedure and a list of French Tech partner incubators can be found on the French Tech Visa website.

TALENT PASSPORT MARKED ‘INNOVATIVE BUSINESS PROJECT’

A Talent Passport residence permit is issued to a foreign national with an innovative business project, which they want to develop in France and which has been recognized by a public-sector body.

Otherwise, foreign company directors, company founders and investors can also apply for a long-stay visa equivalent to a residence permit (known as a ‘VLS-TS’) marked ‘Entrepreneur/Independent Professional’, enabling them to move to France and carry on their business for one year, on a renewable basis subject to certain conditions.
To make France more attractive to highly skilled employees, they are now eligible for a ‘Talent Passport’ residence permit. This permit replaces the old ‘European Union Blue Card’. Holders of a European Union Blue Card granted by another European Union Member State, and who have stayed in that Member State for at least 18 months, may be issued with this type of residence permit if they apply within one month of entering France.

Skilled employees holding a qualification at least equivalent to a Master’s degree issued by a nationally authorized higher education institution may be eligible for the benefits offered by the ‘Talent Passport’ scheme.

The following qualifications are recognized:
- Vocational degrees
- Advanced Master’s degrees and Master of Science degrees (accredited by the Conférence des Grandes Écoles)
- A qualification at least equivalent to a Master’s degree

Employees of an innovative new company (jeune entreprise innovante – JEI) are also eligible for a Talent Passport to boost this type of business and help make France a more attractive business location.

Evidence of JEI status must be supplied by the employer and attached to the application for a long-stay visa and Talent Passport submitted by the foreign applicant to the relevant consulate. For further information about JEI status, please refer to the welcometofrance.com website.

Intra-company transfers are commonplace, and the ‘Talent Passport’ residence permit makes them easier. It is issued to foreign nationals recruited under a French employment contract by the French business where the assignment is undertaken, belonging to the same group of companies as the company that employed them in their home country.

Further information about this procedure and eligibility criteria for the French Tech Pass can be found on the French Tech Visa website.
INTRA-COMPANY TRANSFER (ICT) PERMITS

A specific residence permit for employees posted under an intra-company transfer or in connection with the provision of a service.

Employees are said to be posted when an employer regularly established outside France entrusts its employees with a specific assignment to be undertaken in France.

During the posting period, posted employees keep their employment contract with their original employer outside France, which oversees them and has the power to control the performance of assignments and sanction any shortcomings.

French employment law (Labor Code) allows for the following categories of posting:
- Performance of a service.
- Intra-company transfer.
- Provision of employees on a temporary basis.
- Undertaking an own-account activity.

When undertaking intra-company transfers, employees posted to France by an employer located outside France and whose original employment contract are maintained are not eligible for a ‘Talent Passport’.

Subject to conditions on length of service within the company and pay, among others, posted employees may be eligible for another type of multi-year residence permit:
- The ‘Intra-company transfer’ (Salarié détaché ICT) permit.
- The ‘Intra-company transfer’ (Salarié détaché mobile ICT) permit, if they have already been issued with this type of permit by another European Union Member State.

Postings to France must be notified in advance by the employer based outside France, using the Ministry of Labor’s mandatory paperless service Sipsi.

Where a bilateral social security agreement exists, a social security certificate of posting must also be applied for from the relevant liaison agency in the home country before the employee arrives in France. This document certifies that the posted employee remains registered with the social security system in their home country.

Postings are, by nature, temporary. Once they have completed their assignment, posted employees return to their position within their home company.

Validity period: The same as the assignment, up to a maximum of three years (non-renewable).

Procedure: Applications must be submitted to the French embassy or consulate in the foreign national’s usual country of residence no more than three months before the date of arrival in France.

Employees meeting the conditions enter France with a long-stay visa marked ‘salarié détaché (mobile) ICT’, valid for three months, which allows them to apply for a corresponding residence permit.

The residence permit must be applied for upon arrival in France at the Préfecture of the applicant’s place of residence in France.

Taking up paid employment: The multi-year residence permit is valid as a work permit and allows the holder to take up the paid employment for which the permit was issued.

Extending a stay: The total length of stay in France may not exceed three years (including visa, initial application and renewal).

Renewal applications within this period must be submitted to the Préfecture two months before the residence permit expires, provided that the conditions of issuance of the permit are met.

Accompanying family members: The spouse should apply to be issued with an “Intra-company transfer – family” residence permit (salarié détaché ICT – famille or salarié détaché mobile ICT – famille) authorizing them to reside and take up any paid or self-employment in France throughout the validity period of the foreign employee’s permit.

1 With effect from January 1, 2018, a contribution of €40 will be payable each time a posting is notified (valid for six months).
Applying for a residence permit (Talent Passports and intra-company transfers)

1. Visa application and residence permit application prepared by the foreign national with the host or originating company.
   - Application submitted 3 months before arrival in France.

2. Consulate or French Embassy in the employee’s usual country of residence.
   - Visa issued (pre-requisite to obtaining a residence permit once in France).
   - Processing time: 10-30 days.

3. Vis a issued (pre-requisite to obtaining a residence permit once in France).

4. Residence permit requested Préfecture or Sous-Préfecture where the employee will be residing in France.
   - Residence permit issued.
   - Processing time: 1-2 months.

5. Arrival in France.

Applying for a residence permit (excluding Talent Passports and intra-company transfers)

1. Work permit requested for the foreign national by the host company in France from the DIRECCTE (local employment authorities).

2. Work permit issued by the DIRECCTE, which forwards it to the consular authorities being used by the foreign national applicant.

3. Visa requested, along with the work permit, by the foreign national from the Consulate or French Embassy.

4. Arrival in France.

5. Medical examination booked at the Immigration and Citizenship Office (OFII); visa approved for 1 year.

6. Stay may be extended by requesting a residence permit from the Préfecture.

7. Visa issued.

SOCIAL PROTECTION

Foreign nationals may opt for continued coverage by the health and social security system in their country of origin if a reciprocal social security agreement exists between France and their home country. France has an extensive array of bilateral social security agreements, making it all the more easy to transfer employees. In the absence of a reciprocal agreement, any employed or self-employed person working in France must be registered with social security. All employees working in France, irrespective of their nationality, age or type of employment contract, must be registered with the general scheme of the French social security system, while directors are typically covered by the French social security scheme for self-employed workers (RSI).

REGISTERING WITH FRENCH SOCIAL SECURITY

Foreign employees working in France are, in principle, subject to French health cover and social security legislation, regardless of their nationality or the location of their employer.

Accordingly, employees and their families enjoy full access to France’s generous social security system, which includes:
- Insurance against ill health, maternity/paternity, disability and death
- Insurance against accidents at work and occupational disease
- Pensions
- Family benefits
- Unemployment benefit

Salaries and benefits (benefits in kind, expatriation bonuses, etc.) paid to foreign employees are subject to all social security contributions at current rates, payable to the mandatory and supplementary schemes.

Employers are responsible for registering their employees with the French social security system, if this is not already the case, through a registration request with the local health insurance fund (Caisse primaire d’assurance maladie – CPAM) via a pre-hiring declaration form (DPAE).

Employees and accompanying family holding a ‘Talent Passport’ residence permit should contact the CPAM in Paris, which centralizes registration requests and handles various formalities.

Once they have been enrolled with the French Social Security system, each insured party is given a social security number and a ‘Carte Vitale’.

A Carte Vitale is a smart card holding all information about the insured patient so that the French social security system can make healthcare reimbursements, and the holder can get their healthcare costs paid up front in this way (the so-called tiers payant system).

EXEMPTION FROM FRENCH SOCIAL SECURITY

Citizens of the European Union, European Economic Area and Switzerland may be posted to work in other Member States for a two-year period (renewable once), and may consequently continue to make contributions to the social security system in their home country.

Employees from countries that have signed bilateral agreements with France may remain registered with the social security system of their country of origin during all or part of the duration of their posting in France.

The length of time for which coverage can be maintained from the social security system in the country of origin is specified in the bilateral agreement (from a number of months to five years), as is the length of the first posting, which may be renewable.

In practice, employees must provide evidence that they are registered in their home country to benefit from the application of European Union regulations and bilateral social security agreements.

Employers should contact the liaison body in their employee’s country of origin to obtain a posting certificate before their arrival in France.

At the end of the initial or extended posting period, posted employees must register with the French social security system. They may, however, choose to remain registered with the social security system in their home country.
DETERMINING TAX RESIDENCY

Tax residency is not a matter of choice for the employer or the employee; it depends on legal or reciprocal agreements and treaties.

Registration with the French social security system has no bearing on determining tax residency.

A person is considered to be resident in France for tax purposes if one of the following criteria is met:

- If France is the person's permanent place of residence, i.e. the habitual place of residence or that of their family (spouse and children).
- Where the person has dual permanent residence, if France is the center of their financial and personal interests.
- Where the person's center of interests cannot be determined, if their primary place of residence is in France (they reside in France for more than 183 days in the same year).
- In the absence of any other deciding criteria (primary place of residence or no place of residence in either country), if the person holds French nationality.
- In the event that the person has dual nationality or neither of the two nationalities, the matter is decided by mutual agreement of the tax authorities in the two countries.

Tax residents in France are taxed on the entirety of their income earned from French sources or from other sources, but are also subject to international tax treaties and certain special tax systems, such as those for expatriates.

If foreign sources of income are also taxed in the country of origin, double taxation is avoided by application of clauses written into a large number of bilateral tax treaties that France has signed with other countries (through the use of tax credits, etc.).

THE FRENCH TAX SYSTEM FOR RESIDENTS

INCOME TAX

A French resident’s income is taxed at progressively higher rates.

Progressive tax rates in 2017

| Income up to €9,710 inclusive | 0% |
| From €9,711 to €26,818 inclusive | 14% |
| From €26,819 to €71,898 inclusive | 30% |
| From €71,898 to €152,260 inclusive | 41% |
| More than €152,261 | 45% |

Salaries (tax category “wages and salaries”) are taxable once social security contributions and all other mandatory contributions and business expenses have been deducted.

HOW IS INCOME TAX CALCULATED?

Income tax is calculated on the basis of the combined incomes of the household, which includes the resident, any spouse, and any dependent children. Income to be declared may come from various sources [wages, salaries and allowances, pension annuities, property income, etc.].

The effective tax rate is determined on the basis of the size of the household using the family allowance method, whereby the total household income is divided by the number of household units, as follows:

- One unit for each adult.
- One half-unit for each of the first two children.
- One unit for each child thereafter.

The effective tax rate on total household income is thereby determined on the basis of the size of the household. Assuming income remains unchanged, the more dependents a household includes, the lower the tax rates it pays.

Other expenses may also be tax-deductible or eligible for tax credits; these include expenses for domestic help, and certain household capital expenditure.
The following example is for a married couple with two dependent children. Their total household income amounted to €70,000 in the 2016 tax year, on which €4,742 was payable in income tax.

SPECIAL TAX EXEMPTION SCHEME FOR EXPATRIATES

A special tax exemption scheme for expatriates exists to help attract company directors and employees to France by providing partial income tax exemption and diminishing their liability for the ‘wealth tax’ (impôt de solidarité sur la fortune – ISF).

CONDITIONS

The scheme is open to employees and company directors, regardless of nationality, coming to work full-time in France on condition that:
- They have not been a tax resident in France during the five years prior to the date they started their job.
- They are resident in France for tax purposes.

ADVANTAGES

The expatriate tax exemption scheme applies for up to eight years starting in the first full year after expatriates assume their new position, no earlier than July 6, 2016 (otherwise, exemption only applies for five years).

Beneficiaries of the system receive exemption on:
- Additional remuneration directly related to their work in France, i.e. expatriation bonuses as set out in their employment contract.
- On part of their remuneration corresponding to work performed abroad, on condition that the trips made outside France are for the exclusive benefit of the company.
- Many mobility-related allowances (e.g. payments for a reconnaissance trip, agency fees, moving fees and travel costs, school fees, etc.).
- Half of all income from securities, capital gains from transfers of shares and ownership interests.
- Wealth tax (impôt sur la fortune – ISF) on their assets located outside France.
- Social security contributions paid to a scheme in a foreign country.

Total exemptions are capped at 50% of all remuneration or, alternatively upon request, 20% of taxable income earned for work performed abroad, excluding expatriation bonuses.

Moreover, assignment remuneration is now exempt from payroll taxes. This additional exemption only applies to pay received from January 1, 2017.

TAXATION FOR NON-RESIDENTS

Non-residents working in France are only taxed on income from French sources.

Remuneration paid in return for work carried out on French soil is taxable in France.

Unless otherwise provided for by a tax treaty, salaries paid to non-residents are subject to tax deduction at source at a rate of up to 20% for the marginal income exceeding €41,327 (as of 2017).

Non-resident employees are still required to file an income tax return with the French tax authorities at the Service des impôts particuliers non-résidents (tax service for non-resident individuals) and, if necessary, pay any difference between the amount deducted at source and the tax due.

In order to avoid double taxation, tax deducted at source in France usually gives rise to an equivalent tax credit in the country of residence (depending on the tax treaty between France and the country of residence).

Furthermore, most international taxation treaties make provision for temporary postings, whereby income earned through salaried work in a country is not judged to be taxable in that country if the beneficiary resides there for less than 183 days per year, and if their remuneration is paid by or on behalf of an employer who is not resident in that country.
